- The Culture Trip listed Penang as one of the 15 Best Cities in the World for Food (2016)

CHAR KOAY TEOW

Penang is famous for its charred and aromatic Char Koay Teow found at most coffee shops and food courts here. Koay Teow, the common flat rice noodle, is fried in high heat with prawns, cockles, eggs and bean sprouts in a fiery display over a charcoal fire.

CHEE CHEONG FUN

A breakfast dish or teatime snack, Penang's Chee Cheong Fun includes steamed noodle rolls uniquely prepared with a combination of three sauces – sweet sauce, chilli sauce and its most notable hae ko (prawn paste). Sesame seeds are also sprinkled on top for some added crunch in each bite.

NASI KANDAR

A popular local feast of curry-based meat dishes and vegetables served with hot steamed rice. Indian-Muslim vendors traditionally walked the city streets with baskets carried over the shoulder on bamboo poles or kandar. Today Nasi Kandar restaurants are found everywhere in Penang.

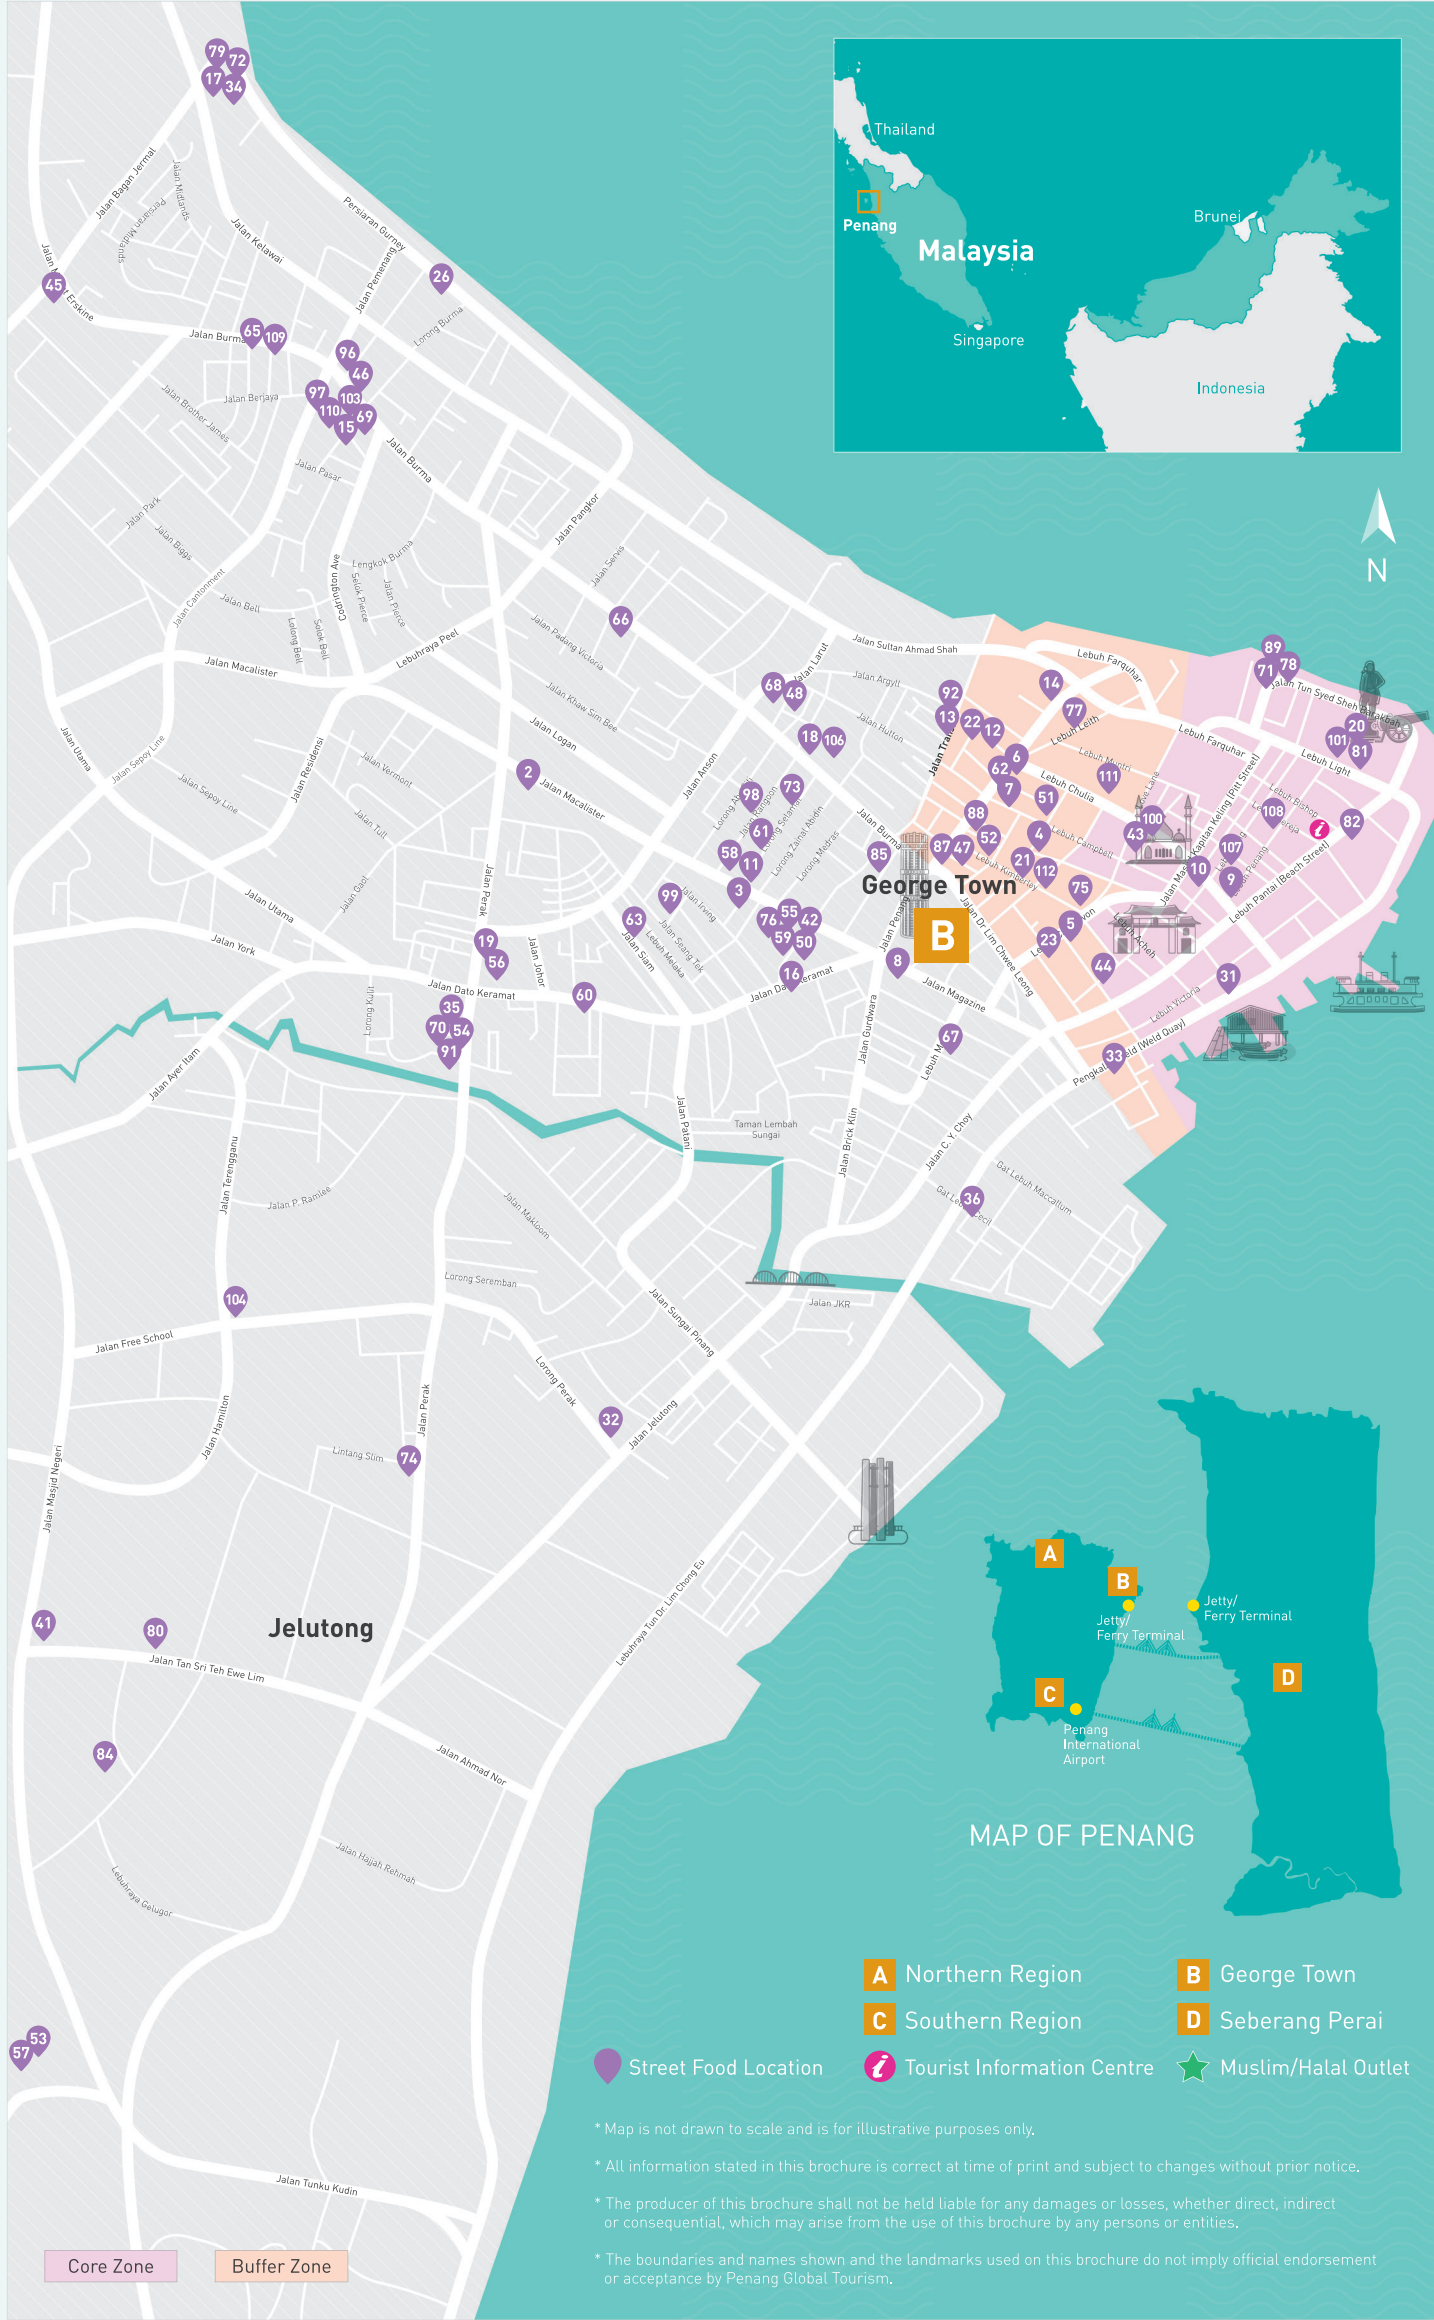

CENDOL

It's a sweet icy delight to indulge in on a hot day. Cendol's signature green jelly noodles are served over shaved ice with kidney beans and drizzled with copious amounts of coconut milk and palm sugar syrup known as gula melaka.

FRIED OYSTERS

Locally known as Oh Chien, it is one of the most iconic street foods in Penang. The omelette is made of a mixture of fresh succulent oysters, eggs, rice flour batter, coriander leaves and starch to give it a gooey consistency. It's served hot off the griddle with chilli sauce as a dip.

PENANG ASSAM LAKSA

The world-famous Penang Assam Laksa, is a sour and spicy noodle dish consisting of tangy fish broth that will tease and tantalise your taste buds. Filled to the brim, a bowl of thick rice noodles is generously garnished with finely-sliced onions, cucumber, pineapple, red chillies, mint and torch ginger buds. It's also served with a spoonful of thick prawn paste (hae ko) for those who love an even fuller flavour.

MEE GORENG

Mee Goreng translates simply to 'fried noodles' and is found at most Indian-Muslim or mamak restaurants and street stalls. Stir-fried in a hot wok with chilli paste, ketchup, soy sauce, eggs, bean sprouts, bean curd, potatoes and meat, it's a complete meal on its own.

POPIAH

Popiah is a type of Chinese spring roll that consists of an amazing assortment of ingredients such as finely grated turnips/cicama, carrots, French beans, lettuce, sliced bean curd, fried shallots and shredded omelette. Sweet bean and chilli sauces are spread on a soft paper-thin crepe made of wheat flour and then neatly wrapped with its filling.

AIS KACANG

Literally translated as 'ice beans', Ais Kacang is a colourful spectacle of red kidney beans, sweet corn, gelatinous nipa palm seeds and grass jelly laid over a mound of shaved ice then drizzled with rose syrup and evaporated milk or coconut milk. You can also ask for a scoop of ice cream on top.

HOKKIEN MEE

A noodle-based dish drowned in spicy soup – stock made from prawn shells and pork bones. This mix of egg and rice noodles is garnished with slices of boiled eggs, meat, prawns, water spinach, fried shallots and a dollop of homemade chilli paste called sambal.

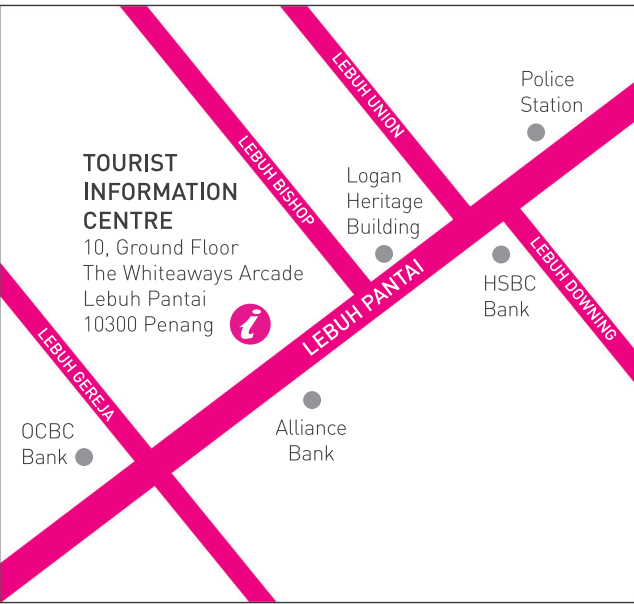

PUTU MAYONG

Known as idiyappam or string hoppers, Putu Mayong's origin can be traced back to Southern India. This simple dish is mainly made of steamed rice flour. Locals love to eat it with fresh grated coconut and a hint of salt, while some prefer it with brown sugar or white sugar, making it both a sweet and savoury treat.
